

At the year's turn
in the days between

we step away
from what we know

wall and window
roof and road

into the spaces
we cannot yet name

cloud and sky
cloud and wings

Slowly the edges
begin to yield